td exported from sketchup to 3ds max. I have the model, materials, animations, cameras, lights, and shaders prepared and ready to go. But I am facing some issues that I don't know how to resolve. I exported the model from sketchup to 3ds max, but I don't know how to get a.obj file from this. Do I have to import the.obj in sketchup and export again? How would I do this? I've tried using "Export to mesh" feature of sketchup, but there is no.obj format available in that. It exports it as a.hwo format. I need.obj format. I also tried exporting the 3ds max to.obj format, but when I open the.obj file, it's not visible in 3ds max. I am not sure how to import this.obj format into 3ds max. Any help is much appreciated! A: The way I do it is first export the 3ds model to mesh, then open it in FreeCAD. This has the advantage that FreeCAD has many different importers. Then open FreeCAD's File -> Import -> SOB (some other format). This will open the model in FreeCAD's "model" tab, which should be something like this: Now you can either double-click on the mesh model (where the.gltf is in the File menu) to see its file properties, or double-click the "Export/Save/Save as" button to see the exporter options. The exporter has many different options, but generally it's important to check "Auto Merge" and the "Vertices" option to get the correct.obj format.
